Asa Bartlett Reported To Have Admitted Slaying Three

POLITICS BLAMED FOR THE TRAGEDY

Minister Foregoes His Funeral Sermon In View of Feeling

(Associated Press)

MUSKEGON, Mich., May 31.—Asa Bartlett, 28-year-old Blue Lake township constable, has confessed sending the bomb that killed August Krubaech, supervisor, his daughter, Jeanett, and her fiancé, William Rank, last Thursday.

Details of the document will not be revealed, until Bartlett is arraigned tomorrow, according to Prosecutor Dunn, who made the announcement Bartlett had confessed.

Bartlett signed his name to the confession just as the three hearers and the long funeral procession of the three bomb victims were driven away from the Elks temple here on an 18-mile journey to a cemetery at White all.

"I couldn't stand to have Krubaech running the township," was all Bartlett vouchsafed in explanation.

Details of the confession have been withheld at Bartlett's request. He said he did not want to upset his parents and friends by the confession will appear after Memorial Day.

Officials readily agreed to this, in view of the increasing bitterness against Bartlett, in the White Hall and Blue Lake districts. Hundreds of the country folks drove many miles through the sand hills and cut over and yesterday to pay tribute to the slain tavern keeper, his daughter and Obie Frank, the girl's sweetheart from childhood, to whom she was to have been married Saturday.

Funeral services were conducted by the Rev. Charles A. Clay, of the White all Congregational church, who was to have officiated at the wedding. The pastor told Mrs. August Krubaech that because of the feeling in the community, he would not trust himself to preach a funeral sermon and confined the service to the reading of the scripture and prayer.

It was intimated that sensational developments would follow revelations of the text of the Bartlett confession.

Bartlett had told the prosecutor he would waive examination tomorrow.

Automobile Afire On the Bee Line

A Ford runabout, said to have been owned by Walter George, and driven by Fred George, was damaged by fire last night when the machine caught fire at a point on the Bee Line highway, near the hospital. The car, it is said, had just taken on gasoline at a nearby filling station. The Albany department answered the alarm and extinguished the blaze. The department was followed to the scene by scores of automobiles.

OVER MILLION AND HALF IN BUILDINGS

More than one million and a half dollars worth of building is either underway, or projected for the next few weeks in Albany-DeCATUR.

This astounding figure is giving great impetus to the strong undercurrent of optimism now prevailing throughout the Tennessee Valley and especially in Albany-DeCATUR.

Approximate totals are: Highway bridge across Tennessee river, now underway, at a cost in excess of half a million; contract to be let soon for Limestone county approach to bridge, including bridge skirting edge of Beaver Lake and two miles of paving, with fills, cost not yet estimated; work underway on road from here to Lawrence county line; contract awarded by board of revenue of Morgan county for $26,000 expenditure on county roads; contract to be let soon by building committee for $60,000 addition to hospital.

Bonds sold by City of Albany for school improvements totalling $75,000 and public improvements totalling $11,000; work to start within few days on razing present Central Baptist church preparatory to erecting a new structure at an estimated cost of about $125,000; congregation of Central Methodist church considering plans for new structure at cost of about $200,000.

Messrs. Dillehay and Penney announce plans for apartment house on Grant street and Sixth avenue at a cost in excess of $50,000; the Southern Railway, now completing $200,000 worth of improvements on the river bridge, is expending in excess of $50,000 on installation of a "passing track" and "Y" as part of a plan for improvement of local yards.

The Union Compress company, purchasers of the Decatur Compress company, will begin work in a few days on construction of new warehouses at a cost of $100,000, with a view of increasing the capacity of the local compress from about 80,000 bales annually to 125,000 bales; the Decatur Brick Corporation is completing expansion of its plant at a cost of $50,000; the Alabama Brick and Tile company is expanding its plant at a cost of several thousand.

The Alabama Power company, having just completed a new power circuit in Decatur at an estimated cost of $10,000, is building a new line into Falkville to give that city and intermediate points initial light and power service; the Decatur Ice and Coal company, having completed installation of new electric equipment in its original plant, will begin work soon on a new plant in Albany, between Second avenue and the Louisville and Nashville railroad tracks; the Pan-American Oil company announces it will erect a five-stand wholesale distribution plant here and three retail filling stations, cost not estimated; the Woco-Pep company is building a $10,000 station on Bank street and has plans for other stations.

In addition to these projects, representative of one industrial plant was here last week, looking for a location; representatives of three other plants are expected here during June to look over the possibilities of Albany and Decatur as sites for big plants.

Truly the day of the Twin Cities is dawning.

JUDGE MAYFIELD IN THE VALLEY SECTION

Candidate For Senate To See Friends In North Alabama

Giving further evidence of the fact that the political battle ground of the state has been transferred to North Alabama, Judge Mayfield, of Montgomery, candidate for the United States senate to succeed Senator Oscar W. Underwood, has arrived here to wage a personal campaign in the Tennessee Valley.

Judge Mayfield was preceded here by a Mayfield car several days. His plans for his work in this section have not been disclosed by his campaign managers.

John H. Bankhead, candidate for the senate, was here last week, spending a great deal of time in Morgan and adjoining counties. Both Mr. Bankhead and Thomas E. Kilby, a third candidate, are expected to return to North Alabama soon for a series of debates on Muscle Shoals and other issues.

NEW WITNESSES ALLEGED BY STATE

Alleged Companion Of Two Deputies Said To Be Located

(Associated Press)

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., May 31.—In addition to the discovery of another woman, believed to have accompanied Deputies Byron Shirley and Dewey Barrett on the death ride Tuesday night, when State Law Enforcement Officer John T. Jones was slain, the state today pronounced that two new witnesses have been found.

One of them is said to have been an eye witness to Jones' death.

This information was given out Monday morning at the office of Solicitor Jim Davis, although the identity of the new witness and the "mystery woman" was not divulged.

Discovery of the woman in the case was made yesterday after state law enforcement officers had continued an unlimited search in the Bessemer district.

Solicitor Davis declared that the woman has admitted being with the deputies when Jones was slain and also to have asserted there was no other woman present. Much importance was attached by the state to the three new witnesses uncovered by the officers yesterday as it has been claimed by the defense there were no eye witnesses to the tragedy other than the deputies.

Immediately after the shooting information was received by state authorities that there was a woman with Shirley and Barrett and although it has been persistently denied by the defense, the state has been working unceasingly to discover her.

According to Solicitor Davis names of all state witnesses will be turned in to the clerk of the criminal court either today or tomorrow and summons will be issued for the trial.

Defense counsel has not yet surrendered their lists of witnesses, although it is believed subpoenas will be issued soon.

METHODISTS STAND BACK OF ACTION OF BOARD OF STEWARDS

Two Plans Are To Be Discussed By That Ruling Body

LEADERS SPEAK OF PRESENT NEED

Finished Building Not To Cost What Was First Estimate

Unanimous endorsements of determined line of action by the board of Stewards of Central Methodist church was given Sunday by the congregation, with a view towards a definite building program.

Opening in the Sunday morning service with song and prayer. Rev. James D. Hunter gave a preliminary account of what has been done by the Board of Stewards in introducing the subject of building to the assembled congregation. He called upon various members and officials of the church for expressions.

L. R. Nash who was chairman of the investigating committee, which committee undertook to obtain plans and cost estimates for the new church building, explained in detail the plans as submitted by J. A. Lewis, engineer with the firm of Miller and Martin, Birmingham. Blue prints were spread before the congregation, along with the architect's drawing of the finished plan.

Various leaders of church departments were called on for talks, explaining the need for additional equipment and space. Morris Ford, chairman of the Board of Stewards, Mrs. F. L. Carswell, president of Missionary organizations, Mrs. Earl Hodson, Young People's leader, C. D. Patterson representing the Sunday school department and Judge L. P. Troup, representing Young Men's classes all spoke loudly of the need for additional equipment, declaring that the church must have the planned additions, else refuse to contemplate further growth.

Motion was then made by A. P. Johnson to invest the Board of Stewards with authority to select whatever plan they saw fit, with the sanction of the congregation. The Board of Stewards has the alternative of throwing aside building plans at the present time, adopting the unit plan for the building of a Sunday school addition at an approximate cost of $75,000, or selecting the entire building plan. The latter plan was originally quoted at $210,000, but based on local prices it is believed that the entire structure can be built at a cost of $170,000. The vote of the congregation after some discussion, was unanimous, no voice being raised against the proposed vesting of authority in the hands of the Stewards.

The regular meeting of the Board of Stewards is scheduled for tonight but it is not believed that action will be taken regarding the building plans.

SCOPES CASE NOW BEFORE HIGH COURT

'Something More' Than Evolution Is Declared at Stake

(Associated Press)

NASHVILLE, Tenn., May 31.—Five lawyers for John Thomas Scopes today addressed to the supreme court of Tennessee an appeal from the conviction of the Dayton school teacher for violating the evolution law.

One representative of the state, Ed T. Seay, of Nashville, made oral argument in support of the conviction and of the constitutionality of the law.

"There must be something deeper, something broader in this misdemeanor case than whether evolution shall be taught in the schools to arouse such widespread interest," he declared.

"Our adversaries tell you it is a controversy between modernists and fundamentalists."

"But I tell your honors, there is something more."

He cited the interest of the American Civil Liberties Union, represented in the case here by Arthur Garfield Hays. He referred to a book by Clarence Darrow, counsel for Scopes, defining the theory of evolution and declaring that "every scientific man knows quite different," than the Biblical concept of the creation.

Packed in every available spot in the courtroom, standing on chairs, tables, windows and in doors, auditors listened to the three and a half hours of argument. Fans and hats waved vigorously as the crowd sought to stir up a breeze which was not to be had.

MOTOR CLASSIC IS DELAYED BY RAIN

Drivers Moved To Their Pits To Await End Of The Showers

(Associated Press)

SPEEDWAY, Indianapolis, May 31.—The 500-mile automobile race over the Indianapolis motor speedway was halted temporarily at 175 miles today due to drizzling rain.

The drivers, waved to their pits by a yellow flag were instructed to remain with their cars but not to touch them. The race may be resumed when the rain stops.

Before the race was halted, Ben Jones, driving an Indianapolis car, crashed into a retaining wall on a turn. His car was wrecked, but he miraculously escaped injury. Jones presumably, was blinded by the rain which smeared his goggles.

At the time the race was stopped, Frank Lockhart, a 23 year old daredevil, driving his first major event, was leading with Harry Hartz second and Earl Cooper third. The time was an average of 97.91 miles an hour.

It was the first time in the history of the motor classic that the event had to be stopped because of weather conditions.

Indications were that the race would be resumed after a short delay. After it was halted, the drizzle stopped and the sun tried to break through the clouds. The wind, sweeping the two and a half mile brick course, gave hope that it would be dry quickly, thus removing the danger of skidding.

SYNOPSIS

When he had recovered from her astonishment Molly Shannon accepted the marriage proposal of Gregory Cochran, the Governor-elect. She is mistress of the executive mansion now. As she drives home one day she is seen and discussed by Stephen Renfro, to whom she was once engaged, and a stranger from the east. The newcomer is to attend a dinner at the Governor's house that evening. In the afternoon Molly goes to the Governor's office and "rescues" him from his work.

CHAPTER XXIII

Mr. Stephen Renfro was one of those graceful easy-going people who make it a point never to look any disagreeable facts in the face. It was due, no doubt, to this happy gift that he still believed himself a very exemplary sort of person, and his own good opinion was necessary to him as air to breathe. Like many another humorist, he had reserved no ray of wit to search out the deep-hidden absurdities in himself.

On this June morning, as he mounted the steps leading from the street to the lawn of the "mansion," he was feeling particularly well disposed toward Mr. Stephen Renfro and the world in general. He had had good news, prodigious—as yet scarcely credible—news. And he was about to do a friendly turn to some one who . . . Well, the truth was, he had never felt quite comfortable on the score of a certain small matter. He had done the best he could at the time, but still . . . It would be pleasant to tilt the balance the other way. Incidentally, to show that one harbored no petty jealousy.

"It is Mrs. Cochran I wish to see," he explained.

ony or ill will, where a man of lesser caliber might well feel he had some right.

Arrived by easy gradations at the front door, he was informed by Uncle Ike, who happened that morning to be relieving the usual incumbent, that the Governor was not at home. A fact of which he was already well aware.

"It is Mrs. Cochran I wish to see," he explained in his leisurely drawl.

From the desk, his eye traveled to the windows at the back—the garden beyond. A figure in blue linen and wide hat was on her knees before a rose bush, examining intently the under side of the leaves. On the ground beside her lay a small garden spray and other implements.

He took a step forward as she appeared in the doorway. Her face, flushed from the sun, was half hidden by the floppy big hat. The heavy gloves which she was in the act of drawing off were covered with earth.

Molly, who had not caught the mumbled announcement and was still a little blinded from the sun, started as Renfro advanced to meet her. This room was the one spot in the house where nobody, not even her husband, intruded without invitation. The mistake, however, was plainly Uncle Ike's. "Oh, good morning!" she said. "Mr. Cochran's not at home. Uncle Ike should have told you."

"It was you I wished to see," Renfro informed her. "I only wanted to remind you that we were once very good friends, before I ask you to do a kindly turn to the memory of that friendship. What I'm going to say may sound on the face of it a little absurd. I'll have to ask you to take my word for it that it's not. Briefly, I mean, be the next Governor of this state. Your husband is the only obstacle. I want you to use your influence with him. . . . Oh, I'm not asking his help—just hands off and let Mowbray and me fight it out alone."

Molly was regarding him with undisguised amazement. "My husband would think me quite demented," she said, "but—of course this is only another of your famous jokes. It's been so long—I'd almost forgotten that one must never under any circumstances take you seriously!"

Even Renfro's equilibrium wavered a little, but he recovered quickly. He had only to remind himself that he was trying to do a handsome and a generous thing. Of course, if the party of the ascendant part would not be advised . . . "Strike two!" he murmured. "Do you remember the first? Anyway," he added, "I'm perfectly serious now. I want you to use your influence . . ."

Molly laughed. "I have none. My husband manages his own affairs."

He nodded. "Precisely—and you manage him." He favored her with his most ingratiating smile. "I know. I'm a husband myself!"

She shook her head. "If I had any such influence, this is the last case in which I would wish to use it."

"You mean on my account—personally."

"Not at all."

"Because of my political affiliations, then?"

She made a slight affirmative sign and looked again at her watch.

He shifted a little in his chair to face her more directly, assumed his most telling argumentative pose. "There are more ways than one of looking at that," he said. "You probably don't realize that Cochran's attitude toward business—big business—is turning millions of dollars away from this state every year—hindering development, crippling industry, impoverishing the people . . ."

"I hadn't noticed that things were in such a bad way," she suggested mildly.

Renfro stood up. "Practical! the watchword nowadays all right. Visionaries and enthusiasts are distinctly in the discard. Of course—I don't include Cochran in that list." He proffered that with a large tolerance. "He's practical enough—knows what he's after, too. I'll wager—though nobody else seems to."

Molly rose also. "Some things are so simple that they escape notice," she submitted.

He shook his head. "Nothing simple about Cochran." Still the beneficent tolerance. "Deep—too all-fired deep, most of us think! Anyhow, I'll be glad enough to have him on my side in this coming election. You see, I'm counting on you . . ."

She regarded him for some moments in silence. "I can't have given you that impression," she said.

"You mean—you refuse?"

"If you put it that way . . ."

"I feel sure you're going to change your mind—again I must ask you to take my word for the statement. As a friend—he emphasized the word mellowly—"I beg you to do so now."

"It wouldn't be any use if I did. You must know how absurd the whole proposition is."

Renfro's mouth took on its most confidential and engaging quirk. "My dear lady—not absurd. I assured you of that to begin with. However, it's quite all right. I only thought you might like to lay a kindly deed on the altar of old friendship." He took up his hat and moved with his usual sauntering grace toward the door.

"I shall see you at the dance to-night, I suppose?" He fell readily into the timbre of politely casual conversation.

Molly touched the bell for Uncle Ike. "I expect to be there," she said.

The engaging quirk took that also into account. "I have rather a particular reason for asking," he explained. "A friend of mine from the East, Arthur Bancroft—I believe you met him last night . . ."

"Yes."

"Well, it seems he has some story or other he wants to tell you."

CHAPTER XXIV

The alumni dance is not strictly a university function, though it marks the close of the college year and is attended by a terrific crush of students, alumni and otherwise. Its purposes have been absorbed to a considerable extent by the town, and what it really amounts to is a sort of whirlwind finish to the social season at large. When it is over, at six a. m., students may be seen hurrying away to catch early trains. Everybody else goes home, closes green blinds on white colonial houses, and departs for Saltito or Michigan or Colorado Springs.

The dance takes place at the city's one sizable hostelry, a faded relic of one-time grandeur—amateurs of commercial travelers from Chicago to the Rio Grande. Its ballroom, however, is ample. Palms, ferns, unlimited quantities of flowers, conceal the fadedness, while the Southern moon converts numerous small balconies into retreats worthy of the most exacting Julietts.

CATARACT CAN EASILY BE ELIMINATED

Impairment of the Sight by This Malady Need Not Be Endured, for a Skilled Surgeon Knows How to Correct It Painlessly.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M.D.

United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

YOU will never have another pair of eyes. During a lifetime you have a lot of teeth, at least two full sets, fifty or sixty in all. But two eyes are all you have and all you ever will have.

It pays to take care of this precious pair of orbs. If you lose one eye you are miserable and unhappy over the loss. But to lose both is one of the most dreadful misfortunes in human experience.

There are many eye ailments, any one of which may wipe out vision. The eyeball may be normal in appearance, but the seeing power is gone. Or something may happen to blur out the front of the eye, the cornea, even though all the parts back of this film are perfect in every particular. Cataract is a condition found in advanced life, rarely before fifty-five or sixty. It is a perfectly painless thing, showing itself by loss of sight, but with no external sign of its presence.

A film, or "skin" covering the front of the eye is not cataract. Cataract is an opacity of the crystalline lens, back of the colored part of the eye, behind the pupil. It may be seen possibly as a silky, filmy, silvery substance in what should be the jet black pupil. But it takes sharp eyes to make it out without the aid of special instruments. I want to make clear that cataract is not a growth on the outside of the eye. It isn't a disfiguring thing. But it gradually increases in density until all form is lost to the sight. Light and shadows may be seen by the victim, but nothing else.

As I have said, it produces no pain, redness or discomfort of any sort, except the impairment of the sight. Fortunately one eye is spared a long time after the other has lost its use. Of all the serious eye troubles, cataract is about the most comfortable to have. It does not hurt and, when it is ready for operation, it can be removed by a delicate but painless operation. A local anesthetic is used, so there is not the danger, not the discomfort of a general anesthetic.

After the operation the patient is kept in bed three or four days, not because he is sick, but merely to keep him quiet. The bandages are left off after a few days and then with the fitting of spectacles, the thing is all over.

I don't want to make it seem too easy to get rid of cataract, but really it is not a formidable thing as operations go. There is no danger to life, usually no suffering, and no prolonged recovery.

If I had to choose some serious ailment I should take cataract.

Why Americans excel

THE genius of America is restless. It is always striving to master new problems; and when new problems are solved, it advances to others. It is never satisfied.

For that reason we are constantly moving forward into new fields of discovery—insatiable, always demanding something newer, something better, something different.

Nothing demonstrates this more remarkably than the advertisements you read. They cover the entire range of human requirements from the absolute necessities of life to the most refined luxuries. Yet they are constantly changing. This continual change means fresh material, fresh ideas, a stimulus to new endeavor.

The moment you cease to find interest in the advertisements of the offerings of industry, of commerce, of art—that moment you will begin to retrogress, and the world will slip away from you.

Reading advertisements is looking forward

TODAY 12 Years Ago

From the Daily of May 31, 1914

May 31, 1914, falling on Sunday, there was no issue of The Daily of that date.

Neither weather or politics promise to be tepid.

If Pilsudski is going to do for Poland what Mussolini has done for Italy, pity the Polish.

We notice with regret that our proposed curb market is still curbed.

Bear in mind that on the night of August 10, The Daily will give its greatest "election party" in history. Make your plans now to be present.

Some bright cartoonist pictures the victory of Vare in the Pennsylvania senatorial candidate as another win for "Bubbling Over."

Dr. Sam Small is talking today upon "The Devil in the Schoolhouse." Wonder whose children he is talking about?

If the cities were as full of mosquitoes as Second Avenue is full of bumps, even the health department would be suffering a malarial attack.

To know you are in the right is in all correctness, but to look upon the technical side to see if you cannot justify yourself in being in the right, that is a certain sign that you are in the wrong.

The suggestion given to the writer the other day that he make a trip into Morgan county, that he might learn of actual conditions existing in the road situation is not at all appropriate. It makes the writer wonder if the man who suggested such a trip has designs upon his life.

As we learn that Editor Pierce of the Huntsville Daily Times is suffering a nervous breakdown, we feel regret. Mr. Pierce has been hammering at the bright side of the Huntsville civic situation for a number of years and his hammering has brought good results. Huntsville is growing. His city will miss his versatile pen, even for so short a time until he is well again.

WORDS OF ADVICE FROM THE EAGLE TO THE YOUNG MAN AT EVA

Some days ago this newspaper entered further service, you might call it public service, yet The Daily is not in the habit of doing such deeds more often than every 14 years. A young man from Eva came into the office and while we expected him to pass the time of day, pay for his subscription or ask a direction, he did none of those things. In fact he was interested in nothing commonplace. What he was after was a wife and he believed the newspaper a good agency, or matrimonial bureau. Here's what the Dothan Eagle has to say about the heretofore unrecorded incident:

We realize of course, that old maids know more about raising children than does a mother of five, and that bachelors know more about women than did that famous of glutton for punishment, King Solomon. And realizing this, we hesitate to pass out any information on how to annex a wife.

But we read a piece in the Albany-Decatur Daily that overwhelms our resistance.

A farmer, age 24 years, walked into the office of that newspaper and asked the management to help him find a woman willing to take his name and wear it from now hence. In reply to questions asked him, he displayed at the outset a fundamental innocence of all knowledge pertaining to the female complex.

"Do you want a blonde or a brunette?" he was asked.

"Blonde," was the prompt reply.

And thus he cast his dye. He does not know that blondes are the most stubborn creatures on earth, with the possible exception of mules and brunettes, and that they do not wear quite as well. And he does not know that his expressed preference has sent despair into the bosoms of any number of brunettes who might have made application for the job.

Also he knows nothing about winning a wife, or he would have stayed away from a newspaper office. He would have bought himself a flivver instead, and the rest would have been a cinch.

He does not realize that any undersized male can climb behind the steering wheel of an automobile, adopt a blasé expression and intrigue the girls when otherwise they could not be intrigued.

Intrigue. That's the word. Be intriguing!

And do not announce your preference so boldly. If it comes to a show down be content with a lady who has hair of an undecided color, eyes of a greenish-blue-brown and a figure that's a cross between a furniture van full of empty bottles and a real estate agent in knickers.

Now, The Daily does not agree that an automobile horn and balloon trousers will solve the matrimonial problem or every pining young man who wishes to take a beautiful young lady to his manly bosom, yet The Daily believes in advertising. Advertising, coupled with the fact that the famous bride month of June is about to make a triumphal entrance should be sufficient to bring a spouse to the yearning heart of the young Evatts.

Young women often do not have their own way, possibly some of them have difficulty in keeping their conscience clear for wasting time with some of the young gentlemen with steering wheel experience only. Therefore, for timely advice as this intriguing month of June rolls round should be, "Girls Beware! Balloon trousers may cover a multitude of shins, but no possible defense for covering the first of the month bills."

THE MAN OF THE HOUR TO LEAD A FINAL OFFENSIVE

The political whip has cracked. With the handle in his hand, A. G. Patterson leads the people of the Tennessee Valley in an onslaught upon the forces of the radical and reactionary regime. The drive has begun, the final drive, the final offensive and into this final drive The Daily joyfully joins with a rising confidence that Mr. Patterson is the man of the hour, the one man who can defeat the machine precision of organized politics which has swept this state for the past four years.

No longer will halfway measures be tolerated. The political cauldron is boiling, the fight has been brought into the open and back of this leader of men, this carrier of the public burden must Morgan county and the Tennessee Valley rally. From now until the date of the Democratic primary the fight is to be fought in the open. Either the people of the Tennessee Valley will rally about the standard of the strongest candidate in opposition to the forces of Charles McDowell, else they will allow to live untrammelled the enemies of political faction. A split in the ranks of the solid Tennessee Valley, Northern Alabama, will allow the reactionary regime to again take up its abode in the state's legislative halls, there to again enact legislation detrimental to the people, there to continue in blood money practices, there to cast the burden of education taxation upon the shoulders of the poor, there to say to the great corporations of the state, "There will be no added taxes, let the people pay." Morgan county with a voting strength of over 4,000 can ill afford to do less than stamp out class politics, personal animosities and throw to Andrew Patterson the magnificent majority he expects from his home county.

There is no doubt but that Mr. Patterson will build roads, that he will increase educational facilities, that he will stamp out the stain of the convict leasing system and that he will force the time honored political spoils system to the wall. He has proved his ability and his worth as a public servant. What stronger argument can be presented by any candidate as for his fitness in the highest honor his state can bestow?

The Daily is interested in the state race, to be sure. The Daily asks majorities in every county of the state for Morgan's candidate, but realizing that benevolence must begin at home, if it can be termed benevolence, The Daily asks that Morgan county present a solid front for her candidate. When Mr. Patterson entered the race for governor he did not do so without thinking, he did not do so without the encouragement and the backing of his friends, legion over the entire state, he came to them first and after having been given assurance that a phalanx of friendship for himself and his public and private record would be thrown about him he made his entrance. Not until he had been given that assurance did he consider the position, then he opened his campaign upon a platform which has since proved a basis for every candidate in the race, with the exception of the provision for a substantial bond issue for good roads and the tendency to tax railroad properties up to the point where Alabama will be on a par with other states in the southeast. On the subject of good roads, Mr. Patterson has certainly made himself clear. He asks to be given an opportunity to prove to the people of Alabama that he can raise $8,000,000 per annum for roads without the flotation of a bond issue. Mr. Patterson likewise adds that should such a sum prove insufficient for Alabama road needs, although the commission at the present time has averaged $5,000,000 in road expenditures per year, then he will advocate a bond issue of substantial proportion to allow Alabama to continue her prosperous steps toward the ranking position commercially among Southern states.

Morgan county and the Tennessee Valley has a debt to pay in the coming governor's election. The Daily would not make such a statement if it did not feel that the candidacy of Mr. Patterson is based primarily upon the strength and encouragement which the Morgan county candidate has been promised in his home section. The Daily would not remind its readers of such debt were it not for the fact that this newspaper is backing a candidate who is qualified in every respect for the high honor which he seeks, capable through the proof of past service unswerving in reputation and character though he has been at the helm of an important position for a number of years and great corporations have had access to hearing. Mr. Patterson has not failed once in this important position and it cannot be expected that he will fail when he occupies the governor's chair.

As for his opposition, the three in the race opposing Mr. Patterson are all splendid gentlemen, else they would certainly not offer for the position which they now seek. Their records as legislators, two of them, their private interests are not to be regarded as interesting to the people, for the hand of the corporation is plainly seen in their administration of legislative affairs. Mr. McDowell will gather the machine vote, he will not find more strength. Mr. Carmichael is to be reckoned with in the Tennessee Valley to some extent. Mr. Graves has his strength to be counted upon. All three have reached the peak in their candidacies, they have gone so far and they can go no further, they do not even expect to go further.

Now is the hour for the Patterson drive, now is the hour for the people of Morgan county and the Tennessee Valley to determine their own strength, to learn that the North Alabama vote rules the state of Alabama. We have the strength, let us use it wisely in the election of a candidate who is proved in public service. We have taken enough chances with promises, we have gone far enough in state history with the reactionary element and the radical tendency. Today we face the last great offensive, the tide to carry the Tennessee Valley into the ascendancy, the tide to wash away the last remaining hope of the reactionary element, the tide to carry into office a man who will fulfill the obligations he feels placed upon his shoulders into bringing just taxation upon those able to bear the brunt, the man who will abolish the convict leasing system, the man who has made his promises for the increase of educational facilities in this state, the public servant to continue the building of roads in Alabama, good roads, permanent roads without hindrance of political promise, or through lack of organization. The Daily presents to you the man of the hour, Andrew G. Patterson, "Morgan County's Own," the chosen leader of the forces in the Tennessee Valley, the man to whom the people have rallied twice with the greatest majorities ever accorded a candidate with opposition in the race for an important state office. Fulfill the obligation you have taken, cast a vote for progress in the August primary, cast your vote for Andrew G. Patterson, the chosen leader of the people.

PATTERSON CANDIDACY IS GIVEN ENDORSEMENT

THE REASON, THE NEED AND THE MAN TO BEAT CHARLES S. McDOWELL

The restoration of state government to the people of Alabama requires a house-cleaning at the State Capitol, a riddance of the time-servers now leeches to public payrolls, and of those janitories of privilege potent in administrative councils. It will involve, first, the recognition of educational needs in Alabama, and the election of an executive who will impose upon persons and interests best able to bear it a proper share of the cost of educating the state's children; an executive who will not encourage lawless elements; who will make justice an agency of good morals and good government; who will encourage a wholesome respect for the law; who will put a clean conscience above income from entangled humanity in the coal mines of this state, so that humanitarian impulses will not be shocked by a brutal state policy, nor the finger of shame pointed at the people of this commonwealth. It will require an executive who will scourge the incompetents from office, and drive from the capitol those who place self above love of state, and who will put in office only those animated by the sole desire to serve the public.

Charles S. McDowell would not meet these requirements, and his election would be the greatest disaster that could befall the State of Alabama. It would encourage lawlessness by leading persons convicted of crime to believe the parole system of the present administration would be continued. It would encourage those who look upon the government as a thing to be used for private gain. It would lead the owners of secured wealth to believe that no proper share of the expenses of state government would be put upon them, but that the burden would be borne by citizens of ordinary means. It would hearten railroads unfriendly to the $10,000,000 investment by the people of Alabama in the port of Mobile, and cause them to believe that terminals in Louisiana, Mississippi and Georgia, owned by them, can be protected and developed at the expense of the taxpayers of this state who have undertaken the burden of building a port of their own. It would please those who desire a political road commission, under machine control, with the spoils of political favoritism as a certain reward.

For two months, since the primary entries were closed, The Age-Herald and associated newspapers have published, from week to week, upon invitation of these newspapers to the candidates, a full statement of their views upon the problems of administration in Alabama. But the voters of Alabama can nominate but one man. They must decide, from the platforms and the records, upon the candidate most likely to defeat Mr. McDowell and thus bring the people back into control of their own government. The views of candidates opposed to Mr. McDowell have been widely circulated among voters who are to make the final choice. With the platforms and public records of the men, comes the element of equipment, experience in public affairs, their general attitude toward public problems and the public's confidence in their sincerity and good faith. It is the belief of The Age-Herald and associated newspapers that these newspapers belong to the people as mediums of information, and in conformity with this principle, they have sought fully to enlighten the voters of the state who are to make the choice as between those opposing McDowell; to impartially present their qualifications, their records, platforms, and the attitude they have assumed toward the needs of the state. Newspapers should not dictate; but, having unusual sources of information, it is alike their right and their duty to advise with the voters in all cases when they believe the public welfare is at stake.

In this spirit, and weighing, we believe, present issues in Alabama from the standpoint of the public interest, it is the conclusion of The Age-Herald and associated newspapers that the record of A. G. Patterson, because of his faithfulness to the public as president of the Public Service commission; because of his knowledge of the pathetic conditions existing in Montgomery during the entire four years of the Brandon administration and his willingness and ability to correct them, because of his courage and vigor in dealing with public questions, because of his freedom from the control of privileged interests; because of his commitments in behalf of education, and the moral and material advancement of the state, and because of the confidence the voters have heretofore manifested in him, is the best equipped, the best qualified candidate for governor, the candidate who has shown the greatest measure of strength before the people, and the one, therefore, with the best chance to defeat Mr. McDowell, and thus save Alabama from a political calamity of far-reaching and sinister significance. For Mr. Patterson, in his race in 1920, carried 63 of the 67 counties of the state and in 1924 carried 66.

The public record of Charles S. McDowell is one of unperformed promises, and consistent hostility toward enlightened and material advancement of the state. The heir and defender of the Brandon administration with its shameful abuse of the pardoning power in liquor cases, which has offered encouragement, rather than discouragement to law violators. Mr. McDowell's election would be a disheartening episode in Alabama history, a distinct detriment to good morals; and an implied rebuke of those who believe in wholesome respect for the law.

Public enlightenment has no champion or defender in Chas. S. McDowell. The plea of children for education would not untie his ears or open his heart. The higher citizenship obligation to educate the youth of the state, particularly the youth that must receive an education in public schools, has found Chas. S. McDowell unresponsive. The prime obligation of a sovereign state, to see that those of wealth shall pay a just share of the cost of education has found no sympathy, no support at the hands of Chas. S. McDowell. Mr. McDowell seems to think enough money can be taken out of the poor man's pocket to finance public education in Alabama.

On the other hand those who would use and abuse the power of public agencies for private gain have found in Chas. S. McDowell an eager and an easy champion. Best illustrating his point of view and his unfitness for public office, was his vote against the submission to the people of the issue of a port at Mobile to protect the commerce of this state, to guarantee the farmer protection against excessive ocean transportation charges in marketing his cotton, and to insure the profitable use of the Warrior river by providing a port outlet for the protection of our great mineral districts. McDowell refused even to trust the people to vote upon this issue, and thus sought to keep them from having a voice in their own government. Not that he was against the building of the port at Mobile; that is not the issue. What McDowell voted against was a legislative act that merely permitted the people to decide whether the people themselves wanted a port; he opposed their right to reach such decision at the ballot box! This was the legislative action of the lawyer for the Central of Georgia Railroad with a port at Savannah in another state.

Government in this state must be restored to the people it was established to serve; it must be made to serve the people who own it and contribute taxes to maintain it. The people are tired of invisible government under the control of a small political machine, supported and kept in power by interests seeking special favors and unmerited protection. Three and one-half years of Brandon have made it plain that if we are to have schools, if we are to have good roads; if we are to have needed public betterments; an enlightened conscience and good morals; law enforcement; wholesome progress, mentally, morally and materially, we must put in office men unafraid and untrammelled, whose sole objective is to serve the public interest.

The man to defeat Mr. McDowell is the man who has a vote-getting record for such has evidenced the confidence of the people in him. When A. G. Patterson was practically drafted into the public service as candidate against Sam P. Kennedy, who was recognized as representing selfish reactionary groups in Alabama, Mr. Patterson, without political experience, was called from his private business, at financial sacrifice, and entered the fight in behalf of the public. He presented the issue clearly to the people, and as a result received 67,150 votes against Sam P. Kennedy's 37,726, although Mr. Kennedy seemed impregnable entrenched by the support of the state machine. After four years, or service, showing an independence of attitude resented by certain privileged groups and the machine, they brought forth the strongest opposition they could to Mr. Patterson's re-election. But the machine and special privilege failed. Patterson was re-elected to the presidency of the Public Service Commission by the largest vote received by any candidate with opposition running for office in that primary, and carrying 65 of the 67 counties in the state! Again the public certified their confidence in him, after reviewing his four years in office.

That is the practical vote-getting record of A. G. Patterson. It makes him potentially available as the one man to prevent the election of Chas. S. McDowell. And one of the candidates, either Mr. Patterson, Mr. Carmichael or Mr. Graves, must beat McDowell. The forces that are against machine rule, the forces that are staunchly for education; the forces that believe the burden of state government should rest primarily on the shoulders of the poor man, must concentrate on a candidate, and utilize their voting power to wrest control of the state from those who seek to use it for low and selfish purposes. If these forces are scattered among Patterson, Graves and Carmichael, it will create a situation that will bring upon the people defeat and continued humiliation.

What has A. G. Patterson accomplished for the people to justify the public confidence that resulted in his practically unanimous re-election as president of the Public Service Commission? Let it be reviewed in orderly process, for the voters should know, from the record, his watchful, independent courageous and untrammelled devotion to their interests. For the information of the voters we will review a few of the conspicuous achievements in the public behalf:

Secured passage of the Alabama transportation act of 1920 amplifying the powers and duties of the public service commission.

Brought about reorganization of the entire public service commission with five departments: engineering, legal, transportation accounting and secretarial, all retaining trained experts.

Inaugurated rigid system of inspection of utilities and transportation companies.

Responsible for reduction in telephone charges in Alabama amounting to approximately $218,000 per year.

Secured $5,000,000 reduction in valuation of Alabama Power Company for rate-making purposes, saving enormous sums to consumers of electricity of Alabama.

Set precedent by denying the Alabama Power Company petition to develop Lock 17 on the Warrior river because it did not offer plan for complete hydroelectric development of the stream.

Succeeded in effort to secure re-valuation of Mobile Gas company properties for rate-making purposes, a victory meaning thousands of dollars to the people of Mobile.

Carried on the fight before the interstate commerce commission which resulted in restoration to the Alabama commission of its supervision over interstate rates, growing out of the Meridian rate case.

Made an unsuccessful fight before the rules committee of the last house of representatives dominated by the burden of proof bill which would have required railroads to show justification for increasing rates, rather than putting the burden of proof of their unfairness upon the public.

Secured passage of the law and put into effect in Alabama concentration privileges on cotton that proved the model for other Southern states.

Secured a new scale of fertilizer rates between points in Alabama effecting substantial annual saving to the farmers of the state.

Began hearing cases in the territory affected, saving the people long and expensive trips to the capital.

Refused to permit power companies to construct their transmission lines across state lines because of the belief that interstate control would thus be lost to the people of Alabama and removed to Washington.

Made effective the work of the state securities commission which gives complete protection against frauds and impositions.

In recognition of his work in Alabama the National Association of Railway and Utility Commissioners paid him the high honor last year by electing Mr. Patterson president.

Does not this record, evidencing as it does, Mr. Patterson's primary concern for the people, justify the overwhelming number who voted for him less than two years ago in further evidencing their approval of his four-year course in office, a continuance of their confidence in him, and giving him a chance to serve them in a position offering opportunity for wider service? Does it not justify them in believing that a man with such a public record, unassailable and unimpeachable, is the one best fitted to accomplish the defeat of Mr. McDowell, and thus to restore popular government at the state capital?

As institutions identified with the moral and material life of Alabama, after a close study of the public records of the man, and a careful and unbiased effort to form a fair conclusion in the public interest, The Age-Herald and associated newspapers express the opinion, not only that A. G. Patterson is the best equipped man by training and identity with public affairs to serve as governor of Alabama but that he has a potential vote-getting capacity that

There is an opportunity for clergymen, something more important than the question about Jonah and the whale or man's descent from monkey.

GREAT is advertising, greater even than the much dreaded power of absolute monopoly. The French government owns a monopoly of the tobacco business. If you want a cigar, cigarette or package of "Scarlati" you must buy it from the government.

The French tobacco business is bad, because the government, trusting to monopoly, hasn't done any advertising. Now French tobacco stores are to be made attractive and the government will push tobacco sales, and profit through intelligent advertising.

The French ought to borrow Mr. Whalen or Mr. Schulte from the United States and learn from him how to make tobacco stores pay.

GENTLEMEN of Wall street, who made up their minds that the usual "summer slump" was coming and sold United States values short, are now scrambling around "covering."

Oils go up, rails go up, automobiles go up. It seems hard to make a mistake unless you sell short. Never gamble or speculate, you can't make it pay. But if you have money to invest, invest it in United States.

You may hear bad news of some European bonds soon.

CHARLES E. RUSSELL, city editor of the Herald in the days of James Gordon Bennett, a first class newspaper man with harmless ideas about government, socialism, etc., is not allowed to land in England.

Russell ran for governor of New York as a socialist but it isn't for socialism that England excludes him. Russell's articles on India and Egypt have been bitter against the British government.

It would have been wiser to let Russell land, and see for himself how the British have managed with 100,000 men in India to keep 300,000,000 Asiatics under their thumb. He would also observe that the British have stopped the custom of burning widows, alive with the dead bodies of their husbands in India, and the other unpleasant Hindu habit of marrying girls eight and nine years old, or even younger to men past fifty.

Sweet reasonableness would have done more with Russell than keeping him out.

POOR Abd-El-Krim, hunted over the sands of Africa with his plucky comrades, French bombs and quick-firing guns sending death through the air, gives up after a courageous fight.

And that strengthens the French government, and calls forth talk of "peace with honor."

Nothing pleases a people or strengthens monarchy or republic so much, as news of victory over another country. That's why so many wars have been started.

MR. RILEY, president of a Pennsylvania bank, says too many laws burden the nation. They do and it would be still worse if the nation hadn't formed a habit of deciding for itself which particular laws to obey.

Within a short time four thousand new laws have been offered by different legislative bodies in the United States.

If somebody could invent one law that would compel obedience to the old ten commandments, that would be welcome.

PROHIBITIONISTS plan to run an independent republican candidate for senator in New York state. Gifford Pinchot probably will run as an independent "dry" republican in Pennsylvania. The wet and dry issue is evidently to become important in politics from now until 1928.

New York's dry nomination is based upon the fact that Senator Wadsworth is supposed to be wet. Politicians who ought to know say that an independent would have poor chance against Senator Wadsworth. Governor Finch's chances in Pennsylvania would be much better.

will defeat McDowell, and save the state from the shame of machine rule perpetuation. This must be the result if law and order, and education, and enlightened progress are to supplant secrecy, special privilege, and gang rule under the dome of the Capitol.—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Helpful Advice to Girls

By Annie Laurie

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a girl in my teens and in love with a young man who is a few years my senior. He has kept away for about three weeks. I have written him several letters and he has not responded to any. What must I do to regain his love?

BABY: If this young man has not answered your letters, then you must take his silence as indicative of his disinterestedness. Don't sacrifice your pride and let him think you are pursuing him, my dear. Go about with your other friends and if he really values your friendship he will make an effort to get in touch with you.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

What do you think of a girl who takes the privilege of calling a certain young man over the telephone every night? She has never been introduced and has seen him once or twice.

ROSE: What do I think of a girl who calls up a man to whom she has never been introduced? Well, Rose, I think that the sooner she realizes just how cheap and undignified she is making herself, the better. You would not have much respect for him, if a young man who had never been presented to you took up your time and called you up, night after night, would you? You would be insulted and wonder "how he got that way," wouldn't you? I have no doubt that the young man is thinking just such things about your friend, and I would advise her to stop it at once!

Representative Offers Resolution To Probe Reported 'Flees'

(Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, May 31—Despite the fact congress will not resume its sessions until tomorrow, prohibition continues to be a leading subject of discussion by its members.

Representative Pinkham, republican in a statement published today, calls for a special house investigation committee to determine whether representative Crampton, republican, Michigan, or any other member has received money or fees from the Anti-Saloon League or any other organization interested in legislation, pending before congress.

Charging that Anti-Saloon League controls the government of the United States through fear and by money. "Representative Pinkham made public a resolution he purposes to introduce tomorrow in which he cites a newspaper story quoting Representative Crampton, ardent sponsor of various enforcement measures, as saying that 'from time to time he has received money or fees from an ecclesiastical and political organization known as the Anti-Saloon League."

SHEFFIELD, Ala., May 31—Half famished, Lonnie Pounders, one of six convicts who broke from the Colbert county jail last week, in a spectacular delivery, was caught yesterday when he came to the house of H. Watson, near Russellville, in search of food.

Watson, unaided, brought Pounders back to Tusculum in his automobile. Pounders was being held on a charge of murder thought to have killed his wife in January.

Five other prisoners, all wanted on burglary and grand larceny charges, still were at large, although deputies have searched the woods near Iuka, Miss., where several were reported to be hiding.

Pounders was the only one of the six to escape that was being held on a murder charge.

Chief Deputy Sheriff Hollingsworth, jailer at Colbert county prison who was knocked unconscious on the night of the escape was up Monday and able to get about. He sustained four gashes in his head, when two of the escaping convicts attacked him as he was attempting to lock them in their cells.

Correct weight can be yours

"I DO NOT want to be thin! I just want to be my right weight! I want these hollows filled out. I just want enough firm, plump flesh on my bones to fill out my figure."

Of course you do. You want a figure that you can drap your clothes on—not just hang them on! What's the use of having pretty clothes, if they just hang on you?

And what would you say if you were told you could have the figure you want? A graceful, well rounded body—firm, solid flesh—just enough—just your right weight? You'd be mighty happy, wouldn't you?

Well, then, be happy—because you can have it! Put plenty of red cells in your blood and watch your weight go up to where you want it! That's what's the matter with you! Your blood is impoverished. You need more rich, red blood. S. S. S. is the thing to put red blood in your system. S. S. S. helps Nature build red blood cells by the millions.

You just take S. S. S. and watch how quickly you begin to fill out your clothes. Notice your skin clear of unsightly blemishes—your appetite increase—strength come to flabby muscles—and vim and vigor fill your whole system. It's red blood that does it. And S. S. S. surely helps Nature build that red blood.

S. S. S. is sold by all drug stores. The larger bottle is more economical.

Associations Handled Nine Percent of Cotton Crops During the Past Year

(Associated Press)
MONTGOMERY, Ala., May 31.—About 9 per cent of the 1925 cotton crop was handled by farmers' co-operative marketing associations, say reports received here from the United States department of agriculture. These reports show that the total business of 16 of the larger associations for the crop season will be in the neighborhood of one and one-half million bales. This was the largest percentage of the total crop ever handled co-operatively. The previous record was set in the 1923 crop marketing season when 8.9 per cent of the cotton ginned was marketed through 14 farmers co-operative associations. By states the percentage of the cotton crop handled co-operatively last year varied from about 4 per cent in Missouri to more than 15 per cent in New Mexico and Mississippi. Cooperative associations in Louisiana handled 5.6 per cent of the cotton produced in the state. In Texas the percentage of the crop handled cooperatively was 5.9. In Tennessee, 6.4; in Arkansas, 7.7; in Alabama, 7.9; in Georgia, 9.8; in South Carolina 11; in Oklahoma 12.21 in Arizona 13.9; North Carolina 14.6; and in Mississippi 15.2. Prior to 1921 only an insignificant part of the cotton crop was handled by farmers' marketing associations. In the season of 1921-22 slightly more than 7 per cent of the crop was delivered to seven state or regional marketing associations. In the season of 1922-23, 7.4 per cent of the crop was marketed through such associations. The percentage so handled of the 1924 crop was 8.4.

TUSKEGEE SINGERS
The Tuskegee Singers will appear at King's Memorial M. E. Church, Lafayette and McCartney streets, Tuesday, June 1st. They will sing negro melodies and spirituals. There will be special reserved seats for our white friends who wish to hear these famous singers. Admission fifty cents, children twenty-five cents. The program will begin at 8:30 p.m. James N. Wallace, pastor. 28-3t.

Twelve of the 16 large associations now active in handling cotton are members of the American Cotton Growers Exchange, an organization formed in 1921 as a service and coordinating agency. In addition to maintaining field service, traffic, legal, and systems departments, and handling legislative, financial and other common problems through committees, the exchange maintains a sales service with offices in the principal domestic and foreign markets.

"JOB PRNT DEPARTMENT"

Let The Daily figure with you on your next job printing.

This is an unkind world, and the only time a man gets all the praise that he feels entitled to is at his funeral.

Why doesn't the criminal who wishes to conceal himself become some famous husband?

The Height of Optimism
The fellow, who, on one of these polar expeditions, mails a letter to his folks and puts a return address on it.

Our idea of an optimist is a man who imagines that by getting married he can make his running expenses slow down to a walk.

Am! It So?
No wonder I am on the blink, it gives my nerves a jar. To listen to the cheery gink, Who calls his 4rd a car.

The happiest people are those that never stop to wonder whether they are having a good time.

A little girl had been bothering her mother all day with questions. Finally the mother said, "Mary, do you know that curiosity once killed a cat?" "Well, Mother," asked Mary, "what did the cat want to know?"

Chap who went to sleep in a telephone booth while waiting to get right number must have a rare disposition.

Fable: Once there was an American who did without a thing even though he had the money to buy it.

"Mabel's head is like a door knob." "Why?" "Because it's so easy to turn."

Fate
Why did you bob your hair?
It was so very blond and fair.
It looked so very nice, I thought,
Tied up with a ribbon, you had bought.
To please me so you said.
But it's not so much the bobbing,
But you had it shingled, robbing
You of any way to hide
That old forgotten bob mark.

It is so much easier to dictate letters. You can use fine big words you haven't the least idea how to spell.

A village is a place where Central can tell you why the Browns had a doctor last night.

If girls are nice enough to use flavored lipstick men would quit smoking cigarettes.

Twelve years old: I gotta get an onion to get these cigarettes off my breath.

Eighteen years old: I gotta get a cigarette to get these onions off my breath.

Toastmaster: The next speaker on the program is a man you all know. He is greater than any chewing tobacco, and still more famous than any murderer. His name is a household word in every family, and this town is mighty proud to claim him. It is with pleasure that I introduce—a—er—pss—ss—what the devil's your name?

Barons Take To Tall Timber, Pels Moving Into First Place; Georgia Tech Wins Flag

Back to the tall timber and re-trench, is the word passed along the line to the Barons as New Orleans perched high above the maddening crowd of pennant aspirants as the result of a double victory over the Mobile Bears Sunday. The Barons were tasting the bitter pills of defeat at the hands of Nashville Vols in a bob-tailed 8-1 verdict, cut short when the friendly clouds burst into tears over the big lead the Volunteers had piled up.

New Orleans moved into first place by a two point margin as the Barons halted in their pennant stride. The old Vol jinx is riding the Barons again, heavily this time.

Georgia Tech has grabbed a Southern Collegiate baseball title, it is shown in the following tabulation of the Associated Press.

With practically all member teams disbanded, Georgia School of Technology seems assured possession of the 1926 Southern conference baseball championship. The Yellow Jackets have by far the most impressive record of the season. In addition to obtaining the best percentage, the Atlanta athletics played 19 games against conference foes, which is more than can be said for any other outfit of the organization.

Fifteen of these contests were won by Georgia Tech. Virginia ranks second with seven victories and three defeats. Georgia is third with nine tilts won and four lost. The Atlanta lads passed Auburn and South Carolina by halting Kentucky twice last week. With a pair of conquests in these starts South Carolina finished fourth. Auburn beat nine opponents and was stopped five times for fifth place.

The University of Mississippi, familiarly known as "Ole Miss," Virginia Military Institute and the Mississippi Agricultural and Mechanical College are the only other aggregations boasting percentages better than .500 Florida, with no victories and two defeats, holds the cellar.

Games won by conference teams against conference opponents follow.

News that baseball fans in the Twin Cities are awakening, even at this late hour, it gratifying. Material drifting in from college and high school, combined with material already on hand and anxious to answer the call of the diamond should prove available for a strong home combination. Fans have expressed themselves time and again as being more interested in a home combination than in a more expensive aggregation of ball tossers taken from the outside semi-pro ranks. Further announcements from heads of the baseball move will be watched with increasing interest by the public.

Meeting Held By Girl Scouts Troop

The girl scouts of troop 1 met Friday afternoon at the Albany high school. After the flag ceremony the meeting was called to order by the vice president. Minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

On account of the captain leaving to attend school and members leaving on their vacations it was decided to have only one meeting a month. After other business was discussed the scouts adjourned by singing the good night song.

Hartselle News

Decoration services were held Sunday at Herring cemetery west of Falkville, a large attendance being present from every section of the county. Herring cemetery is one of the oldest burying grounds in this section, tomb stones dating back as far as 1816.

Many of the prominent settlers of the old Cedar plains country are buried there and at McKendree Chapel a half mile further west.

Many pretty flowers were brought and placed on the graves, and appropriate songs and talks were made by some present. These two cemeteries are kept faultlessly clean, a splendid tribute to the worthy citizens of these two communities.

A large attendance was present at the Christian Harmony singing held Sunday all day at West Center church, many noted old time singers from every section of the county and Cullman county being present. Dinner was spread at noon, and singing resumed to a late hour in the afternoon.

Sunday was showery in this section, greatly aiding the young crop which is showing splendidly since the advent of warm days and nights. Cotton chopping was generally observed last week, and some have finished chopping and will give the plant "one dusting process. Agriculturally speaking, everything is looking fine in a radius of this territory.

The protracted services at the First Baptist church will continue through the present week and possibly longer. Sunday afternoon at 3:00 p.m. a service for men was held, at which time the evangelist talked on the subject, "Secret Sins of Men."

At the same hour at the First Methodist church, a service for women was held.

It has been definitely decided that the revival service at the First Methodist church will begin the third Sunday in July, with Rev. M. L. Smith of Woman's College, Montgomery, doing the preaching.

There was no service at the Methodist church Sunday evening, the pastor calling off the services in order to give the opportunity for the congregation to worship at the Baptist church.

A conference is being held at the Church of the Nazarene with delegates from many sections being present. Rev. Hardy of Nashville, Tenn., is preaching, and much interest is being thrown into the services.

The congregation are worshipping in their new brick church, it being completed sufficiently to allow meetings to be held.

Mrs. J. H. Corsbie has returned home after spending the winter with her daughter, Mrs. Grady Sherrill in Miami, Fla.

Vann Pattillo, who has been confined to his bed for the past six weeks is now able to sit up. His many friends are glad to note his improvement.

Many of the young men and women who have been away from home attending college in various states, have returned home for the summer vacation period.

Several of these will take the summer

mer normal course at Florence and University.

L. G. Guley, who has large cedar operations in this and adjoining counties, has established a camp for timber cutters on a large cedar tract near Bluff City on the Tennessee River. The cedar will be manufactured into lengths, and trucked to the mill at this point to be manufactured into lumber.

A wreck occurred near Leesdale on the Bee Line highway about 1:00 p.m. Sunday afternoon, at which time a Ford car was practically demolished, and strange to say, none of the occupants were seriously injured.

A blow-out on one of the front tires caused the driver to lose control, it is said, the car turning over twice, wrecking one or more wheels, breaking the steering wheel into several pieces, and completely demolishing the top.

The driver, said to have been Mr. Bibb who lived near Leesdale, was not seriously hurt and all were taken to their homes.

The Bee Line highway was literally alive with cars Sunday, the pretty day and warm weather making it inviting for outdoors.

E. W. Wilson, Mone Guyer and Otis Glascock returned Saturday afternoon from a fishing trip on the Tennessee river. They gave a fish fry one day last week to a few invited friends from Hartselle, and returned home with a fine lot of fine cat fish.

The roads east and west of the railroad here and at Falkville are in a miserable condition. Holes abound practically the entire distance of the pikes, and the edges have worn until it is difficult to negotiate the distance to say nothing of the unpleasantness of the rough riding.

Unless the east and west pike from Hartselle and the same east and west from Falkville are repaired, the will be completely gone before another summer arrives.
